Nazi War Tunnel, Bored By Slaves, To Open To Traffic

A road tunnel between Austria and Yugoslavia, bored through the Karawanken Mountains by Nazi concentration camp prisoners at the cost of thousands of lives during World War II, will open to road traffic later this year.

The tunnel, 1,750 yards long and 30 feet wide, was planned by the German command as the shortest all-weather link between Munich and Trieste, says the New York Times, and was intended to enable supplies to be rushed to the hard pressed German armies in the southeast.

Now, nineteen years later, it will be used by peaceful motorists, most of them Austrian vacationers on the way to the Yugoslav Adriatic coast. By using it they will avoid a drive over the difficult, 4,480-foot-high Loibl Pass.

When the tunnel was begun in 1943, huge labor camps were set up on both sides of the mountain. A network of bunkers and trenches protected the work from Yugoslav partisans, and working columns day and night bored their way into the rock under the eyes of Nazi guards.

Most of the prisoners were Frenchmen, from the Mauthausen concentration camp. Those who fell ill were killed by injections, and smoke daily poured from the chimney of a primitive crematorium at the south tunnel mouth. How many died there is still not known.

Shortly before the tunnel would have reached completion—it had already been broken through—Hitler's "Third Reich" collapsed. In the last days of the war, orders were given that it was to be blown up, along with the prisoners who worked on it.

An S. S. officer who cooperated with the partisans was able to save hundreds of lives by foiling the order at the last minute. Two years later, the Nazi guards who had supervised the work were brought before a British military court. The commandant and two of his aides were sentenced to death, says the New York Times. Others received sentences of long terms of imprisonment. The cooperative former officer was acquitted.

The "cold war" and tension between Austria and Yugoslavia caused the tunnel to be left for years without protection from sul[illegible] in the mountains. It [illegible]. Water began to [illegible] through and huge rocks fell from the tunnel roof.

It was the Yugoslavs who first showed interest in the tunnel's completion, in order to add to the growing influx of tourists from the West. For a long time, however, the proposal that Austria should contribute to the cost met with no response from the Austrian Government.

The finished tunnel would be an asset almost exclusively to Yugoslavia, it was argued there, and Austria, left with a partly completed network of highways begun by Hitler, had other [illegible].

In 1960, after long hesitation and in spite of many protests, the Austrian Ministry of Trade decided to provide 50,000,000 schillings (about $2,000,000) for the completion of the 550 yards of tunnel on the Austrian side. The Yugoslav side was already completed.

Austrian agreement was considered partly out of political courtesy, to meet Belgrade half way, says the New York Times, and partly because the experts declared that it was the last possible moment to save the tunnel without astronomical expenditure.

Polls Show No German Upsurge Of Jew Hatred

Fears that the trial of Adolf Eichmann would lead to an upsurge in anti-Semitism in West Germany have proved groundless, a study of two public-opinion polls conducted during the last year reveals. The study, published the day before Eichmann was hanged, showed a small decline in anti-Semitic feeling, says the New York Times. The shift, of two or three per cent, continued a trend noted in similar opinion polls undertaken in West Germany over the last [illegible] years.

[illegible] polls and the comparative [illegible] undertaken for the [illegible] Jewish Committee by the [illegible] of Social Research of [illegible] University.

The first poll was taken in April and May last year, shortly after Eichmann's trial opened in Jerusalem. The second was conducted [illegible] years 2 [illegible] weeks after [illegible] Nazi leader was hanged.

In the second poll, fifty-five per cent of the German people had been [illegible] it had no opinion or did not answer or did not know.

To the question, "Which verdict would you personally consider to be the correct one", thirty-four per cent came out for Eichmann's death and less than one per cent thought Eichmann was not guilty.

Responses to questions designed to test basic attitudes toward Jews, such as, "Would you say it were better for Germany to have no Jews in the country", showed a small change from one poll to the other. The same questions have been used in polls for ten years.

College For World Teachers Planned For Israel

The establishment of a special teachers college in Jerusalem for the training of prospective Jewish educators from other nations was proposed to alleviate a critical shortage of such teachers outside Israel. Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, of New York, a prominent Jewish philosopher, who is associated with the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, says the New York Times, asserted that a special teachers college would "assist the development of a spiritual solidarity of the Jewish people."

He urged that such a college be set up at the Hebrew University, addressing 500 delegates and observers from thirty-two countries attending the recent World Conference on Jewish Education at the University. Dr. Kaplan also called for "an elaborate system of Jewish adult studies."

He said this could widen teaching opportunities in Jewish education and provide a stimulus for those who might be encouraged to make a fulltime career in Jewish education.

Dr. Kaplan, who is identified with Conservative Judaism in the United States, said "It would also give Jewish intellectuals, who at present have no function to perform in Jewish life, a chance to devote some of their abilities to the service of the Jewish people."

Delegates at the meeting, sponsored by the World Conference of Jewish Organizations, were engaged in an intensive analysis and discussion of Jewish educational problems outside Israel. Dr. Kaplan urged that Jewish education outside Israel become a "cooperative undertaking" that would be compatible with the "degree of diversity" among various elements in Jewish life.

He recommended that one means of aiding cooperation would be the establishment of a world-wide agency "to administer, wherever needed and feasible," the educational activities of Jewish communities.

Elias Silberschlag, dean of Hebrew Teachers College in Boston, [illegible] the difficulties of teacher recruitment in the non-Communist world. He reported that the United States Jewish community needed a minimum of 800 new teachers last year but that the nine small teachers colleges graduated only 150.

A fervent plea for greater attention to Yiddish as a force in Jewish education was made by Jacob Pat, of New York, director of the Jewish Labor Committee, says the New York Times. Hebrew, rather than Yiddish, is the language generally used in Jewish day schools.

U.S. Weather Chief Was First To Fly Into Hurricane

Dr. Harry Wexler, Director of Research of the United States Weather Bureau, died of a heart attack, while on vacation at Wood's Hole, Mass. He was fifty-one years old and lived in Falls Church, Virginia. Dr. Wexler had been with the Weather Bureau continuously since 1934.

He held citations for distinguished service from the Air Force, Navy, Department of Commerce and National Civil Service League, says the New York Times. From 1955 through 1958, along with his duties at the bureau, he was chief scientist for the United States expedition to the Antarctic for the International Geophysical Year.

Last June, Dr. Wexler and Prof. Viktor A. Bugaev, of the Soviet Union, were the principal figures in drafting plans for use of satellites to improve weather forecasting. These plans were announced by the United Nations World Meteorological Organization at a conference in Geneva on cooperation between the United States and the Soviet in space research.

Dr. Wexler, one of the first scientists to visualize the use of satellites for meteorological observation, was known as the "father" of the Tiros satellite.

He became chief of the Weather Bureau's Science Services Division in 1946 and Director of Research in 1955. During that time, he also served on special Government panels on the biological effects of atomic radiation, polar research, the meteorological aspects of satellites, and on the National Academy of Science's Space Science Board.

After receiving a B.S. degree in mathematics from Harvard University in 1932, Dr. Wexler attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, from which he received a Sc.D. degree in meteorology in 1939, while working for the Weather Bureau.

In 1940 he was Assistant Professor of Meteorology at the University of Chicago. He left this position late in 1941 to engage in defense work for the Weather Bureau in Washington, says the New York Times. In 1942, he joined the Army Air Force's weather service as a captain.

While with the Army Air Force, he initiated weather research that later was developed into the large Air Force geophysics program. In September, 1944, Dr. Wexler, with Col. Floyd Wood as pilot, made the first penetration of an Atlantic hurricane. He rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Dr. Wexler served on the Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards for the Atomic Energy Commission, [illegible] of the Geophysical Research Panel of the Scientific Advisory Board to the Air Force Chief of Staff, and as a member of the Meteorological Operations Subcommittee of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, says the New York Times. He had been vice president of the American Meteorological Society, a member of the Royal Meteorological Society, and the Washington Academy of Sciences, and chairman of the Upper Atmosphere Committee of the American Geophysical Union.

Zionist-Rabbi Urges U. S. To End Help To Arab Countries

Rabbi Mordecai Kirshblum, president of the Religious Zionists of America, assailed the U.S. State Department for "perpetuating the Arab States to continue to discriminate against American firms and individuals who deal with Israel," says the New York Times. Dr. Kirshblum criticized the United States failure to take a stand on the Arab League ban at the 60th anniversary dinner of the Religious Zionists at the Hotel Pierre, in New York.

He said: "The United States government should cease distributing economic, technical, and military assistance to the Arab countries as long as they continue engaging in world-wide campaigns of economic boycott, religious discrimination, and anti-democratic as well as anti-Jewish propaganda."

In another address, Dr. Joseph Burg, Israeli Minister of Social Welfare, said that while "Israel is continuing its quest for accommodation . . . the Arabs are continuing their barrage of hatred toward Israel and still cling to their policies of belligerency, boycott, and general intransigence."

Joseph Ratner, national chairman of the 60th anniversary celebration, noted the program of religious education supported by the organization in Israel and said it was resulting in a "powerful spiritual highway" between American Jewry and Israel.

William Goldfine, president of the Royal State Bank of New York, received the "Man of the Year" award for 25 years of distinguished service to the Jewish community.

A spokesman for the Arab League Office of the Permanent Observer to the UN, asked to comment on Dr. Kirshblum's remarks, said: "The Arab boycott is basically a definite measure in retaliation for uprooting and dispossessing the Palestine Arabs, and also against the danger of Israeli and Zionist expansion. It is legitimate, legal and peaceful, and is not dissimilar from the United States economic boycott against Cuba."

A U.S. State Department spokesman said the Arab states are sovereign, are members of the Arab League, and that the latter has declared a boycott against Israel growing out of the fact that it has declared itself in a state of war with Israel.

The U. S. has never recognized this boycott, the spokesman said, and has worked hard, but unsuccessfully, to get the League to drop the boycott, but has no way of forcing it to do so, reports the New York Times. The spokesman pointed out that virtually all U. S. aid to Arab states is of an economic, not military nature, and mostly made up of surplus food assistance under public law 480.

Brights FINE CANADIAN Wines

SINCE 1874

At your sabbath table, a decanter of wine is as much at home as a challah.

No wine is more welcome in Jewish homes in Canada than Mazel Tov, a wine made from Concord grapes grown on the sunny slopes of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov is ruby red in colour, and richly sweet—but not cloying—to the taste. It's a wine you'll "remember", the kind of wine that you used to taste many years ago.

Mazel Tov, made 'Kosher P'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year for every 'simcha'.

The table was trimmed with red and white carnations. The marriage will take place on June 2, 1963, at Young Israel Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Cukoff, 5764 Fairside Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Henry Seymour, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Beth Zion Synagogue. THE LESSON FROM THE MURDEROUS PAST DEMANDS PRESSING MEASURES FOR THE FUTURE even more important, has not yet been implemented by local legislation in most of the ratifying states, though this should have been done under the terms of the Convention itself. Although some fifty countries acceded to the Convention, it has been enacted by domestic legislation in only three countries. I am happy to say that Israel is one of them.

Laws against genocide, even if they are universally adopted, will not by themselves save us from evil. They will, however, be of great psychological and educational import. Once it has been declared that it is a universal crime to commit, conspire, or incite acts which may cause serious bodily or mental harm to innocent people of a certain racial, religious, or national group, another step in the right direction will have been taken. Yet this by itself will by no means suffice. No entrenchment behind legal provisions will do, unless all freedom-loving men become the constant keepers of the world's conscience.

We Jews must derive a moral from what happened. We have lost more than one-third of our people. We suffer from the loss and miss those centers of Jewry which were a constant source of inspiration and creation in all walks of life, in religion, in philosophy, in sciences, in national ideas. The disaster has left us crippled. To continue our existence we must make up for the catastrophic losses in manpower and in spiritual values. Let us be conscious of this responsibility which, in simple terms, means that every surviving Jew has now to do for his people not only what he would have done anyway, but more. He must contribute what a fallen brother would have physically and spiritually contributed had he been alive.

We must penetrate deeper into Jewish problems, we must look for proper solutions, we must strengthen our Jewish education; in other words, we must be even better Jews than we are. This is the testament of those who departed; this is what they would have willed us to do had they been able to say so.

There is yet another aspect which concerns us all. I mean the state of Israel, the state of those Jews who chose to continue their existence among fellow Jews. I know that the state is dear to you. Israel on its part seeks your affection and love. We aspire to achieve your respect and pride in the existence of free Israel and all it stands for. Let us together make a supreme effort to secure its existence, to insure its development so that it will be able to implement the hopes which hinge upon it. We will surely thereby implement the desire of those six million who have constantly prayed and yearned for the state, but never lived to see it.

We cannot bring back to life the millions of Jews who perished. What we can and must do as Jews and freedom-loving men is to live up to our obligations toward the grave hour in our history when great hopes and expectations arise out of so much misery and tears and blood. For, verily, we are our brothers' keeper.

You relax on a KLM Jet

11. On KLM's intercontinental first-class flights, you get slippers, hot towels, sleeping masks, champagne, and other wines on the house.

12. KLM can meet you with a car at any of the airports it serves in Europe. AVIS drive-yourself rental rates at Amsterdam's airport are lower than in any other European country.

Family plan saves you money

14. KLM has a family plan that saves you money. From October 1st to March 31st, your wife—and children from 12-25—can fly across the North Atlantic with you for much less than the usual fare.

15. The fare on a KLM flight from Amsterdam to London is now about half what it was 40 years ago.

16. KLM carries an average of 3,830 passengers every day—about twice the capacity of a big ocean liner.

Your KLM Captain

17. Your KLM captain sees the weather 150 miles ahead, "Flight watch" on the ground can see still farther ahead, and advise the captain on weather and traffic conditions. If necessary, the flight operations officer can plan alternative routes and pass them on to the captain.

18. KLM pilots help choose the instruments they will use on board a DC-8 Jet. One of these instruments is called the Sperry Integrated Flight System. With IFS, three dials do the work of seven. Captains get flight information faster.

19. KLM pilots help choose the type of aircraft they themselves will fly. No new aircraft is ever purchased by KLM until it has been approved by Senior KLM pilots.

20. Having themselves been professionals in the field of air transportation for 43 years, KLM recognizes that it takes professionals to plan trips efficiently. In every city in Canada, KLM is represented by a professional—your Travel Agent.

FIRST MONTREAL JOINT CAMPAIGN STUDY MISSION MEETS JEWS IN FLIGHT FROM ALGERIA

BY JACOB M. LOWY, OF MONTREAL, GENERAL CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CAMPAIGN AND LEADER OF THE STUDY MISSION

The members of the first Montreal mission to Europe and Israel sponsored by the Joint Campaign for Combined Jewish Appeal, United Israel Appeal, and the Rescue and Survival Fund, returned to Montreal with a feeling of accomplishment of the task allotted to them. This was a working and not a holiday trip which put the members of the mission under a great physical and emotional strain, travelling at times by train, plane, and bus up to eighteen hours a day. Nevertheless, they had the satisfaction of a job well done, enabling them to bring back to the Montreal Jewish community a report and full story of Jewish needs on the European and North African continents and of the role played by the State of Israel in cooperating with the great rescue work of the Joint Distribution Committee, Jewish Agency for Israel; United Hias Service, which is Immigrant Aid, and other Jewish organizations.

The members of the mission visited Paris, Marseilles, the transit camp in Grande Arenas (approximately fifteen kilometers outside Marseilles), Rome, Naples, and Israel, and obtained a complete picture of the current developments and of the factors motivating the large scale migration from North Africa.

The mission witnessed the arrival of boats in Marseilles, Naples, and Haifa, had an opportunity to go on board these boats, and talked to the arriving refugees there, and later at the respective disembarkation centers. Members of the mission also met and interviewed new immigrants as they arrived in Israel at their final destination and homes of resettlement. The mission talked to a number of refugees in Marseilles, Grande Arenas, Naples, and once again to the same people on their arrival in Haifa, accompanied some of them as they were transferred immediately to the homes prepared for them, and know at first hand of the wonderful rescue work carried on by the Joint Distribution Committee, the Jewish Agency, and other organizations, although some shortcomings exist due to lack of funds.

On the whole, the story can be divided into three parts relating to refugees from Algeria; from other North African states; and the reception of immigrants in Israel.

Algeria: Due to the expected independence of Algeria, the exodus from this country has taken on speed beyond all expectations. Whereas, in April only 18,000 people left Algeria, in May 40,000 came to France, and between June 1 to 17, not less than 136,000 people arrived in France with the numbers of arrivals still increasing. About 15 per cent of the arrivals are Jews, but no exact figures are available since Algerians are considered as Frenchmen and are not required to register upon arrival in France.

Algerian Jews are deeply rooted in French culture, consider France as their mother country, and desire, to take root in France, if possible. About ten per cent want to migrate to Israel. The French government enacted legislation to assist the Algerian immigrants. All are entitled to aid provided they are accompanied by the head of the family and sign a declaration of intention to remain French residents.

Due to the existing chaos in Algeria, a great many of the men are afraid to leave the country because of the OAS and consequently most of the arrivals are women and children without the heads of their families. Under a French law they do not qualify for assistance extended to Algerian immigrants and this causes a very serious problem and hardship on the immigrants.

In this instance, the private organizations such as the French Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the FSJU (United Jewish Social Fund), Secours Catholic, the Protestant Social Welfare, and other voluntary organizations, have to step in and extend help to the new arrivals. The French government is aware of the problem and is considering amendments and exceptions to the legislation enacted enabling them to assist families; i.e., mothers with children without their menfolk.

Other North African countries: Arrivals from other North African countries were withessed in very large numbers, 95 per cent of whom expressed the desire to migrate to Israel and are therefore concentrated in temporary camps, reception centers, etc. They are processed by the agents of the Jewish Agency for Israel, in France and Italy, who prepare full medical reports, and information as to their skills and abilities, enabling other overseas agency personnel on the boats carrying the immigrants to Israel to make final decisions as to their destination for resettlement in Israel.

Reception and resettlement problems in Israel: The Israeli government opposes in principle the placement of the arrivals in ma'abaroth (camps) and insists that all immigrants be settled in homes prepared for them, in areas where they can find work, thus avoiding the mistakes made in 1948 to 1950 when hundreds of thousands of immigrants were placed in camps. Most of the people spoken to are very happy at having reached Israel; they are hopeful that they can settle and take root in their new country in spite of the difficulties facing them on arrival.

Due to the flood of immigrants which has become a real exodus from the North African continent, it is impossible for the Israeli authorities to prepare housing in sufficient numbers for the new arrivals and consequently, it was necessary to place immigrants in houses not yet completed, during the last few weeks.

Members of the mission accompanied a bus with immigrants to Afulah where the immigrants were placed in homes without water or electricity, in rooms bare of any furniture, etc. Only after families were placed in these homes were beds, chairs, tables, etc., brought in to the homes and we were assured that light and water would be connected during the very day of arrival of the immigrants. We were told that in some instances, new arrivals have to be placed in homes without doors and windows, which is nevertheless preferable to placing immigrants in camps where they would have to be fed, without a possibility of commencing useful work and therefore, suffering a lowering of morale.

The question of having enough housing for the new immigrants is related to the availability of sufficient funds to finance such housing and it is, therefore, of the utmost importance and a duty of the Montreal community and other overseas Jewish communities to increase their contributions towards the forthcoming campaigns in order to meet their fair share of the cost of this great rescue work.

It should be pointed out that cost of transportation alone for the new immigrants amounts to an average of $250 per person and considering the fact that immigration into Israel is running presently at a rate in excess of 10,000 persons per month, these costs amount to $2,500,000 monthly. The costs of housing per family amounts to between $3,750 to $5,000, of which two-thirds are being provided by the State of Israel with only one-third contributed by the Jewish Agency.

The burden of resettlement is therefore carried two-thirds by the 2,000,000 Jewish citizens of the State of Israel as against a contribution to the extent of only one-third by the 7,500,000 Jews residing on the American continent and other free Western states. Surely, this proportion must be adjusted and Jewry in the free world must assume its fair share of the burden.

The members of the mission are most anxious to convey to the Jewish community of Montreal a sense of crisis and emergency calling for special measures and generous response to help in this great rescue and rehabilitation work in aid of their Jewish brethren from North Africa and some European countries.

One of the major purposes of the Montreal Joint Campaign mission to Europe and Israel was to learn as much as possible of the work of the overseas agencies supported through funds raised by the Montreal Joint Campaign of the Combined Jewish Appeal, United Israel Appeal, and Rescue and Survival Fund. One of the principal agencies is the Joint Distribution Committee which assists Jews throughout the free world with health and welfare problems faced by them, including the possibility of migration when local conditions constitute a jeopardy to life and liberty. The Joint Distribution Committee also sponsors a program known as Malben in Israel which cares for the aged, the sick, and handicapped destitute immigrants who go there.

The Keren Hayesod, or United Israel Appeal, is the fund-raising arm of the Jewish Agency in Israel designed to assist immigrants with their initial adjustment to their new country. The programs of immigration, absorption, and settlement in Israel are handled by an organization known simply as the Jewish Agency in Jerusalem. The United Rias Service is a world-wide migration agency which concerns itself with immigration to all parts of the free world except to Israel. This latter exception is to avoid any duplication of work with the Jewish Agency.

There are, of course, other organizations not as large as the preceding ones which nevertheless do very important parts of the overseas job, such as ORT (Organization for Rehabilitation through Training) which conducts vocational training schools throughout the world to help immigrants learn new skills, to help them in their economic adjustment to new countries; OSE (Organization pour secours des enfants) which conducts a health program in North African countries; Ozar Hatorah and Alliance Israelite Universelle which conduct educational programs among the children in North Africa, as well as a number of other organizations which concern themselves with a particular segment of the problem of helping the up-rooted to find new life in countries where they seek haven and refuge.

All of these agencies cooperate closely so that none will duplicate the services of the other, but through the services of all, homeless Jews throughout the world, who must leave their countries of origin through causes beyond their control, will receive the minimum help which they need to re-establish themselves in free countries where they can regain self-support, dignity, and freedom.

Members of the mission, after completing their brief but intensive on-the-spot study of the work of these various overseas organizations were firmly convinced that all financial help given to their work is wisely and economically utilized. Because of the great increase in immigration and all of the attendant problems involved, it was absolutely clear to the members of the mission that the support for these organizations from Montreal Jewry through the 1962 Joint Campaign must be greatly increased.

Members of the mission were: Jacob M. Lowy, general chairman of the 1962 Joint Campaign who acted as its leader; Moe Levitt, president of the Combined Jewish Appeal; Gordon Brown, immediate past chairman of the Joint Campaign; Cecil Pascal, associate chairman and head of the trades division; Arthur Rudnikoff, special names key man; J. A. Lyons Heppner, co-chairman of the campaign speakers bureau; H. E. Greenspoon and James Raymond, members of the special names campaign committee; and Alvin Bronstein, executive director of the Joint Jewish Campaign.

The Lesson From The Murderous Past Demands Pressing Measures For The Future

Address to the Bnai Brith Triennial Convention in Washington

BY GIDEON HAUSNER, ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ISRAEL

There are focal points in the annals of every nation when history releases powerful forces, which signify new, great turns in the normal flow of historical traffic.

This country knew many such high points which reflected in outstanding personalities, such as the [illegible] of the Constitution, George[illegible]ton, or Abraham Lin[illegible]ng Jewish history these landmarks Egypt, in the [illegible]ears, or in [illegible]ba.

[illegible] a na[illegible] for im[illegible] in a [illegible] are [illegible]ession.

These are the moments which determine a national destinies and when every individual can almost personally feel the touch of the wings of history. It is then, that the future, sometimes the very existence of nations, is at stake.

This generation of ours seems to be at exactly such a crossroad in Jewish history, having witnessed two fateful events following each other: One was the tragedy of European Jewry which found its awesome culmination in the destruction of over six million people; the other was the establishment of a Jewish state in Israel.

Since the emergence of the Jewish people over 3,000 years ago upon its delivery from the house of bondage, we have had varied contacts with the non-Jewish world, contacts which were often hostile, sometimes friendly. But never before was there a phase in which the very existence of the Jewish people as a whole was in danger. With the only exception of the story related in the Book of Esther, about the then attempted genocide, there never was an imminent danger to the future existence of Jewry.

There were, of course, frequent persecutions of individuals or of communities, there were pogroms, extortions, expulsions, and boycotts, there was much bigotry and hatred, but never before did Jewry face the immediate peril of being extinguished. For this nearly successful genocide, we had to wait until the twentieth century, having climbed all the way from the Dark Ages, through the Renaissance, through the cultural and social achievements of modern civilization, only to fall at this turn of history into the abyss of Hitlerism, with its proclaimed policy of hatred and of racial superiority, which inevitably led to mass murder.

This twist in human progress poses a pressing and immediate problem before everyone, Jew and non-Jew alike. How was it possible? Whether we like it or not, this problem will live with us for the rest of our days and will require an intelligent answer. It will not be possible any more to revert to normal, as if nothing ever happened; to shut our eyes or turn our heads away, maintaining we are now to have a fresh start, that bygones should be left alone and that it is only the future which is of consequence. The future stems from the past. Even if we all agree that Hitlerism was a pathological excrescence on our civilization, this would merely be labeling the phenomenon and not explaining it. The question will still remain: How was it possible in this century for a great section of mankind to become contaminated with the infection of an animal disease?

Should we try to explain it away, as some people do, by saying that it was merely an eruption of bestiality out of the depths of hidden layers of evil, then again we have to assume that the evil is here with us, hiding under a cover, thin and vulnerable enough to give way under pressure.

Even more important is the question, "What are we going to do about it?" An organism which can go down with such a disease must be treated and cured; people whose abodes were demolished by a volcanic disaster and whose dear ones were crushed under streams of burning lava, will not and cannot pretend that everything will be all right from now on, that life may go on as usual because the menacing murmur inside the mountain of death is not so loudly heard for the moment.

If moral values are to survive in this world some lesson must be derived from the past and some urgent and pressing measures must be adopted. For us, Jews, if we wish to survive, some practical results must follow.

Let us not lull ourselves into a false confidence that these frightful events are absolutely gone forever. Thirty years ago no one would have believed that in the heart of civilized Europe and of cultural Germany, the Nazis would emerge with all their brutal, unparalleled terrors. How can we be so sure that this is now a closed chapter for all places and for all times?

The overall picture of the disaster which brought about the death of a third of the Jewish people is so staggering that words and imagination fail us in the attempt to describe what happened. Six million innocent people put to death is just too much for the ordinary mind; we can neither grasp nor visualize such an enormous crime. Like rays of light outside the usual span of the spectrum it does not register on our minds. Such figures remain just numbers with no concrete contents behind them.

Let me, therefore, tell you one episode out of the recorded millions. It does not, by any standard, represent the lowest watermark of Nazi depravity. The Nazis were particularly anxious to destroy, as quickly as possible, Jewish children, for they were the hope of the nation's future. In this, among other features, lies the savage uniqueness of the Nazi crime distinct even from jungle savages who save the enemy children if only to raise them as members of the victorious tribe. The Nazis, however, directed their utmost fury towards the Jewish little ones, to make sure that complete eradication of Jews in the generations to come would follow.

Our holidays were occasions especially selected for the massacre of children. Having some knowledge of our prayers on the High Holidays, including the one in which we make an analogy between the Lord sitting in judgment to a shepherd who counts his flock and makes his sheep pass under the rod, the Nazis used this as a special feature of cruelty.

And so it came to pass on Rosh Hashonah, in the year 1943, that thousands of Jewish children were herded out of the barracks of the Auschwitz death camp. An SS man affixed a rod high up on a post and ordered the children to pass beneath it, telling them that those who were not able to touch the rod with their heads would be thrown into the crematorium.

When the horrified children refused to move, they were brutally whipped. And so they started on their way, a piteous column of awe-stricken, emaciated Jewish children. The first ones tried to reach the rod, walking on tiptoes, but this was soon discovered and forbidden. A few others put stones in their shoes to get some additional elevation, to become a little higher than they really were. Over 2,000 Jewish children were too small for their heads to touch the rod, and were thrown into flames that very day.

Those few who managed to pass the macabre test were told by their Nazi jailers that they were allowed to survive for the time being because they were big enough to do some work. But they should henceforth be aware that it was not the Lord in Heaven who was having them pass under a rod to determine whether they live or die; the Nazis were!

I shall spare you some other, even more gruesome examples of bestiality and of deliberate infliction of agony and suffering on millions of innocent people during the twelve years of the Nazi rule in Europe.

The amazing thing about it was that the general intention to destroy the Jews was so openly proclaimed and made known well in advance. In his book, "Mein Kampf," published many years before the war, as well as in his speeches and broadcasts, Hitler did not conceal his evil designs. He preached hatred openly, long before he was able to practice it.

The concentration camps were there for everybody to see, long before civilized humanity rose up in arms against Nazi Germany. It wasn't even a case of signs appearing on the wall; the intentions were plainly and fully expressed. In his famous speech in the German Reichstag, eight months before the outbreak of the second World War, Hitler said that should an armed conflict arise, the result would be neither the triumph of the capitalists nor the victory of the Communists, but the destruction of world Jewry.

Yet nobody cared. The official attitude of the free world was that he could not mean all this seriously; it was no more than a propaganda device. This was the sedative applied to the world's conscience. Hitler did mean it seriously. When given the power and the opportunity, he translated his plans into a gruesome reality. It is a point to remember that even today we are faced with some dictators who make no bones about their intention to annihilate that part of the surviving remnant of Jewry which lives in Israel. Their pronouncements, as before, are ascribed today to propaganda necessities intended for internal consumption only. So this conscience-lubricating device is again applied. There is, however, every reason to believe that these dictators are as serious in their designs as Hitler was and if given opportunity and power they too would carry their evil plans into effect.

It will be not out of context to mention here the neo-Nazi propaganda now disseminated through various media, claiming that the whole story of the destruction of the Jews is a mere fabrication, an invention of Jewish financiers, calculated to squeeze out reparations and compensation from Germany. These people actually say that the Jews are all alive, that the crematoria did not exist. Those chimneys belonged to factories and bakeries!

It hardly seems possible that such delusions could be accepted by any man. Yet they are. There are many pamphlets published by the official information office of a country which is a member of the United Nations containing exactly such infamy — pamphlets by the way, in which I have personally the honor to be mentioned by name as gangster-boss and a persecutor of war prisoners. The preaching of the Nazi Minister of Information, Goebbels, is apparently still being practiced. "The greater the lie," he said, "the greater the likelihood that some people will believe it."

Now what are we, those who survived the flood, going to do about it? Let us not forget that we could all have been personally affected. After all, it was pure chance that led our fathers or grandfathers to leave Europe in time for America, for Israel, or for other countries, and made the fathers and grandfathers of other Jews stay over there. Had our ancestors done differently, we would have been living there and would have been ultimately subjected to all the horrors of hell, whilst other individuals would have been sitting today in this room here.

It is therefore proper that we consider ourselves as having been personally saved by a fortuitous and providential fate. The Nazi desire was to have us all in the gas chambers. In their secret official documents the plan was laid down to destroy eleven million European Jews including those of England and Soviet Russia which should have followed the expected subjugation of these countries. So much was officially pronounced at the Wannsee Conference in Berlin on January 20, 1942. No definite plans were made for the treatment of American Jews, though in other documents it was mentioned that upon Hitler's triumphal march into Washington, American Jews would be included in what the Nazis termed "the final solution."

The hatred of the Jews was Hitler's first step toward the domination of Germany and later of Europe. It was part of his scheme to enslave the world. The final victim was to be civilization itself. It was no accident that the Jews were his first victims for they stood for everything he despised: human freedom, morality, and the brotherhood of man. No co-existence between the Nazi preaching of hatred and the Jewish precepts of morality could be imagined.

The premeditated murder of a people did not start overnight. It began with a sharp anti-Semitism, with the hatred of aliens, with a belief in racial superiority. Therefrom it went down, step by step, in inevitable descent which had its terminal at the gates of the extermination camps. One who begins with hatred sows seeds which, under accommodating conditions, produce bestiality and murder.

The attempt to appease Hitler was futile, as it is futile today to appease hate-breeding centers. Hatred must be faced and combatted. Wherever we recognize the well known signs of anti-Semitism, of prejudice, of the denial of a common obligation between one human being and another, they must be denounced and fought.

It is a dangerous illusion to believe that small doses of hate radiation are not dangerous. They all are, even if the beginning is small, for they are apt to develop into a catastrophe of world dominations. Let us, therefore, be the bearers of the message to the world that any party, any regime, any country, which bases its policies on anti-Semitism or on the intended destruction of its fellow man, whatever the phrases used or the terms in which their preachings are couched, is bound to end where Hitler did.

It was a great American, Thomas Jefferson, who, when speaking about the preservation of civil liberties, coined a famous phrase: "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." He realized that it is for every freedom-loving man to be constantly on his guard against encroachments upon his basic rights. In the post-Nazi world eternal vigilance is the price of civilization and survival.

It is therefore a matter for concern that the Genocide Convention, though unanimously adopted by the United Nations, has not yet been ratified by some states and,
